

PharmESP25 CONFERENCE.

Qatar University (QU)'s College of Pharmacy organized the Pharmacy Education, Science, and Practice Conference under the theme 'Patient First: Advancing Pharmacy through Education, Science, and Practice', spanning over three days from April 17 to 19. The conference served as a strategic platform bringing together distinguished academics, researchers, practitioners, and students from over 20 countries to discuss the latest innovations, challenges, and future directions in pharmacy practice, education, and pharmaceutical sciences. With over 300 participants, the event featured keynote sessions, research presentations, workshops, and interactive discussion panels. Notable speakers included Prof. Sir Aziz Sheikh from University of Oxford, Prof. Khaloud Al-Jamal from King's College London, Dr. Karla Tisocki from WHO, and Prof. Debra Rowett from University of South Australia. The conference reflects QU's commitment to placing patient care at the heart of pharmacy practice while fostering impactful innovation in pharmaceutical education and research.
